

Gold rush in delivery services

Flink, Gorillas, Lieferando, Wolt & Co.

- ▶ What is the idea, what is the message behind those new forms of Quick-Commerce?
- ▶ What are flash supermarkets like Gorillas + Flink trying to tell us?
- ▶ Who will take over the Gorillas brand when they finally go down the drain?
- ▶ Who owns Gorillas, Flink, Doordash and GoPuff? What are the dreams of investors?
- ▶ Is there really a market in flash delivery? Or is it all just fever dreams of cocaine-addicted stockbrokers before the next financial bubble bursts?

V.i.S.d.P.: Elmar Wigand, Köln

Elmar Wigand works als analyst, publisher and campaigner for the NGO aktion ./. arbeitsunrecht (action vs. labor injustice).

He wrote a long piece about that topic in the german leftwing paper junge Welt. He invented and organized -- along with comrades and friends -- the day of action #friday13th that already helped to intimidate, curb, or bring down big players like Toys R Us, Deliveroo, H&M, Tönnies in Germany.

For democracy & Workers rights:

- Stop Union Busting: Establish + protect works councils!
- For occupational health & safety!
- Equipment and repairs are not a private matter!
- Stop temporary & chain fixed-term employment contracts!

The action vs. labor injustice supports committed workers and active works councils. Friday the 13th has been our day of action against bullies, exploiters + union busters since 2015.

Together with workers, trade unionists and social activists, we were able to put the fear of justice into some big companies on #Friday13.

On friday13th August 2021 Lieferando met a key demand of their workers and terminated their limited contracts policy.
